Buddy

AND NOW A FEW WORDS FROM ME...

Hi everyone! I'm Buddy, and as you can see, I'm a very handsome man! I have a lot of energy; I basically do not stop moving. I'm very friendly and cuddly, and just really want some humans to love. I love to be with my people at all times and will follow you around or hang out all day (or night) in your lap, if you'll let me. Just be aware that I don't really like people kissing my face so I will let off a little growl to warn you to back off. I also love going on walks and running around. I'm not very happy about being left alone so I do bark a lot. I've also broken through a crate before when I was left alone so don't even try it! I enjoy hanging out with the resident mini-Dachshund and the large Samoyed. It took me a few days to warm up to the big dog but now we are friends. I hang out with both of them, but I keep myself entertained much of the time. I really love toys! I have a real passion for destroying all the toys. I have yet to meet my match, although I did eat one recently and got sick you'll have to watch me with them and limit my destruction. ! I would prefer an active family that is home a lot to be with me. I love going on walks and can keep up with the Samoyed! One thing I'm really working on is going to the washroom outside. My foster humans have been working on making sure I go outside but this is a work in progress. I have been working hard to ask them when I need to go outside and making my foster parents proud!

I AM...

- Energetic & playful
- Snuggly
- Very anxious, especially when you leave him alone.
- The best destroyer of toys you will ever meet.
- Independent, although he doesn't mind dog friends.
- Athletic. He can keep up with the big dogs on walks.

Buddy

AND NOW A FEW WORDS FROM MY FOSTER FAMILY...

Buddy is an adorable, friendly little guy. He has a cute little frosty face! He came into foster care underweight, but we are working on putting a couple of pounds on him. So far, he has been friendly to everyone he has met while in foster care. He is extremely snuggly and really loves to be close to his people. We have noticed that he does not like it when people put their face very close to his; he does growl a bit and warns you to back off. He enjoys going for walks and walks okay on a leash although he tends to pull at first so this will have to be worked on. Buddy adapted well to our home and routine and gets along with our Dachshund and Samoyed. He likes a good lap and will hang out on the couch getting nice and snuggly. He barks when left alone and experiences separation anxiety. He chewed through a soft crate in about 10 minutes when he was left alone. However he was recently left home alone, loose, with his foster siblings and he settled quickly and relaxed for the day on the couch. Buddy needs to go to an active home with owners who will take him for walks and be home with him much of the time. Owners will need to be committed to walking him and working on housetraining. Buddy is doing much better with house training lately, but he still has accidents inside. Buddy also needs experienced owners who will work on making sure he has boundaries, as well as helping him with his anxiety. He has shown some resource-guarding behaviours when in a new environment and unsure of his surroundings. Buddy has spent time with dog savvy children 12 years and older and has done great, but he is not suitable for younger families since he can be anxious and shy. While it is not imperative that he be the only dog, he might do better in a house being the only dog as he tends to mark around the house and does a great job of entertaining himself.
